

'The true mark of a leader is the willingness to stick with a bold course of action — to push yourself way beyond your present physical limits, to overcome your fear of public speaking or to face daunting interviewers in the selection process. In other words, real leaders are happy to zig while others zag. They understand that in an era of hyper-competition and non-stop disruption, the only way to stand out from the crowd is to stand for something special.'

The Captains Training Camp was a 3-day camp in which cadets were rigorously trained and tested on various physical and mental grounds including long-distance running, weapon training, obstacle training, debating skills, situation reaction test, tent pitching in teams, personal interview, and drills test in order to select captains and vice-captains for the respective companies.

All the cadets put their best efforts and thoroughly enjoyed the camp and it was immensely tough for the judges to grade the competitors. But in the end, the final results are -
